SUMMARY

1. On October 28, 2014, March 29, 2016, and March 9, 2017 (collectively, the “Trade Dates”), Morgan Stanley violated NYSE American Rule 995NY(c) by effecting options and equity transactions after gaining knowledge of terms and conditions of orders in the same or related options series that were not yet disclosed to the trading crowd. From at least October 2014 through December 2018, Morgan Stanley also violated NYSE American Rule 320 by failing to establish and maintain supervisory systems that were reasonably designed to achieve compliance with NYSE American Rule 995NY(c).³

FACTS AND VIOLATIVE CONDUCT

Violations of NYSE American Rule 995NY(c)(Anticipatory Hedging)

2. NYSE American Rule 995NY provides that certain activities constitute prohibited conduct, as follows:

Anticipatory Hedging and Front Running - It will be considered conduct inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade for any ATP [AmEx Trading Permit] Holder or person associated with an ATP Holder, who has knowledge of all material terms and conditions of an originating order, a solicited order, or a facilitation order, the execution of which are imminent, to enter, based on such knowledge, an order to buy or sell an option on the underlying securities of any option that is the subject of the order, or an order to buy or sell the security underlying any option that is the subject of the order, or any order to buy or sell any related instrument until either:

³ This document addresses two matters: (1) Matter No. 20150442463, which involves activity on October 28, 2014, March 29, 2016, and March 9, 2017, on NYSE American, as well as NYSE Arca, Inc., The Nasdaq Options Market LLC, Nasdaq ISE, LLC, Nasdaq BX, Inc., Nasdaq GEMX, LLC, Cboe Exchange Inc., and Cboe C2 Exchange, Inc.; and (2) Matter No. 20170535088, which involves activity on March 9, 2017, on NYSE American, as well as NYSE Arca, BOX Exchange, LLC, Cboe Exchange Inc., Cboe C2 Exchange, Inc., Miami International Securities Exchange, and MIAX Pearl, LLC.

- (1) All the terms and conditions of the originating order and any changes in the terms or conditions of the order of which the ATP Holder or person associated with the ATP Holder has knowledge are disclosed to the trading crowd, or
- (2) The trade can no longer reasonably be considered imminent in view of the passage of time since the order was received.

For the purposes of this rule, an order to buy or sell a “related instrument” means, in reference to an index option, an order to buy or sell securities comprising 10% or more of the component securities in the index or an order to buy or sell a futures contract on an economically equivalent index.

3. NYSE Regulatory Bulletin RBO-AMEX 14-01, titled “Anticipatory Hedging and Frontrunning of Floor Orders” and dated February 14, 2014, states that an ATP Holder may be deemed to have violated Exchange Rule 995NY(c) if the ATP Holder, having knowledge of all material terms and conditions of an order, the execution of which is imminent, enters an order to buy or sell an option on a security underlying any option that is the subject of the order, or an order to buy or sell the security underlying any option that is the subject of the order, or any order to buy or sell any related instrument, prior to the systematization⁴ and representation of such order. Since systemization must precede vocalization of an order, it establishes the best available proxy for the earliest possible time at which an order could have been disclosed to the trading crowd, at which point the order may be traded against.
4. When a member firm engages in anticipatory hedging, or otherwise uses undisclosed information about an imminent option transaction to trade the relevant option or a related instrument, it can disadvantage market participants who are unaware of the information or who refrain from trading based on it. As set forth in NYSE American Rule 995NY(c), such conduct is considered inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade.
5. Here, on the Trade Dates, Morgan Stanley, with knowledge of the terms and conditions of clients’ orders, effected transactions for a firm account in the same or a related security, prior to disclosure to the trading crowd of the terms and conditions of the clients’ orders.
6. Specifically, on October 28, 2014, a firm trader received a client order to buy 1,250 put options of a certain exchange-traded fund (“ABC”)⁵ tied to 95,000 shares of ABC stock (“Client Order 1”). During a telephone call from 10:47:22 to 10:47:55, the Morgan Stanley trader sent Client Order 1 to another broker-dealer for execution with instructions to cross the client order. At 10:48:25, after Morgan Stanley had received Client Order 1, but prior to disclosure to the trading crowd of the material terms and conditions of Client Order 1, the Morgan Stanley trader bought for a firm account 1,082 ABC put options, of which 148 executed on NYSE American, expecting the firm to facilitate the client order. At 10:48:30, the other broker-dealer sent the order to another exchange for electronic execution as a Qualified Contingent Cross (“QCC”);⁷ the order executed at 10:49:17. By engaging in the foregoing conduct, Morgan Stanley violated NYSE American Rule 995NY(c).

7. On March 29, 2016, a firm trader received a client order to buy 15,000 call options of another exchange-traded fund (“DEF”) (“Client Order 2”). On a telephone call that began at 12:58:56 and ended at 12:59:13, the Morgan Stanley trader sent Client Order 2 to another broker-dealer for execution, indicating its interest to facilitate 5,000 of the 15,000 contracts. From approximately 12:59:55 to 13:02:52, after Morgan Stanley had received Client Order 2, but prior to full disclosure to the trading crowd of the material terms and conditions of Client Order 2, the Morgan Stanley trader hedged its anticipated facilitation of Client Order 2 by buying for a firm account 280,000 shares of DEF. By engaging in the foregoing conduct, Morgan Stanley violated NYSE American Rule 995NY(c).
8. On March 9, 2017, a firm trader received a client order to buy 6,842 put index options (“GHI”) (“Client Order 3”). On a telephone call that took place between 8:30:40 and 8:33:42, Morgan Stanley sent Client Order 3 to another broker-dealer for execution, indicating its interest to facilitate 2,000 of the 6,842 contracts. Between 8:32:45 and 8:32:54, after Morgan Stanley had received Client Order 3, but prior to full disclosure to the trading crowd of the material terms and conditions of Client Order 3, the Morgan Stanley trader hedged his anticipated facilitation of Client Order 3 by buying for a firm account 20,000 put options of an exchange-traded fund that is directly correlated to GHI, of which 472 executed on NYSE American. By engaging in the foregoing conduct, Morgan Stanley violated NYSE American Rule 995NY(c).
9. In sum, on the Trade Dates, Morgan Stanley engaged in improper anticipatory hedging, all of which violated NYSE American Rule 995NY(c).

Violation of NYSE American Rule 320 (Supervision)

10. Under NYSE American Rule 320, firms must have supervisory systems in place that are “reasonably designed to achieve compliance with applicable securities laws and regulations and Exchange rules.”
11. Though Morgan Stanley had daily, automated post-trade surveillance that monitored for potential improper anticipatory hedging, the firm’s surveillance was not reasonably designed to ensure compliance with NYSE American Rule 995NY(c). Specifically, the post-trade surveillance parameters that the firm had in place were overly broad and therefore were not reasonably designed to generate sufficient alerts for review to detect potential improper anticipatory hedging, including for review of most of the anticipatory hedging that occurred on the Trade Dates.⁸

⁷ QCC orders are part of a multi-leg strategy that involves both stocks and options and consists of two or more legs, one of which is an NMS stock, effected at a price that has been agreed to by the parties, and the execution of one component is contingent upon the execution of all other components at or near the same time. Additionally, the components must bear a derivative relationship to one another and constitute a full hedge against each other without regard to prior existing positions. QCCs allow institutional brokers to cross these block orders electronically without exposing them to the market, as long as the order is priced at or better than the National Best Bid/Offer.

12. As a result, Morgan Stanley violated Rule 320.

B. The firm also consents to the imposition of the following sanctions:

A censure, disgorgement of $5,261, and a fine of $56,880.

The firm further agrees that it shall not claim, assert, or apply for a tax deduction or tax credit with regard to any federal, state, or local tax for any fine amounts that Respondent pays pursuant to this AWC, regardless of the use of the fine amounts.

The sanctions imposed herein shall be effective on a date set by NYSE Regulation staff.

Nothing in this provision affects the firm's: (i) testimonial obligations; or (ii) right to take legal or factual positions in litigation or other legal proceedings in which NYSE American is not a party.
